

Dear Mr Stevenson and Ms. Evans,

As an active investor in Canadian business both within and outside the stock markets I do not see the need to divulge any more of my personal information than I am already required to do when entering into investments. Reputable companies are currently advising prospective clients of the risks of their investing. I consider it my responsibility to do my due diligence and be aware of the investment that I am putting my money into.

Kathy Helfrick
Calgary, AB