

John Stevenson:

As a holder of various financial instruments in my portfolio, I strongly oppose having to share my personal financial information with every sales person selling whatever as an investment opportunity.

I'm sorry, but these are not qualified people with whom I am sharing this information and allowing them to decide whether or not I qualify.

All organizations selling investment tools have qualified people in their organization that can assess this data and make such a determination.

I believe that we have a privacy act in this country and providing every tom,dick and harry salesperson with my financial information contravenes any "privacy" as far as I see it.

I do not want the CSA to have sales people with this mandate.
